THE STANDARD (flag)

The Ecumenical Catholic Communion is becoming more known throughout the world. An identifiable standard and seal will make our mission and purpose more identifiable.

A standard or flag is an easily recognized symbol using artful design to convey the mission and purpose of an organizational body.

The North American Vexillological Association is an internationally recognized body for the design of standards. The basic rules for design are:

1. Keep it simple.
2. Use meaningful and distinctive symbols that are readily recognized.
3. Use two to three vivid contrasting colors that are interrelated.
4. Do not use letters or figures.
5. The overall composition of the standard must be balanced and clearly represent the organizational body or federation.

THE SEAL

The seal incorporates symbols and vibrant colors that signify the history and purpose of the organizational body. It does not necessarily replace a logo of the organizational body already in use.

White represents peace, sincerity, truth and purity of consciousness. Red represents the Spirit of courage, valor, commitment, magnanimity and martyrdom. It is also the color chosen by the Old Catholic Church of Utrecht. Gold represents universal goodness, wisdom, benevolence and the justice of God’s reign revealed in the Gospels. It also signifies the unity of the world-wide Ecumenical Catholic Communion.

The eight pointed blue star represents the Blessed Mother, her trust, fidelity and integrity as the first of the disciples of Jesus. It does not appear on the standard in order to maintain the principles of design.

The motto is “in unity, essential, in liberty, non-essentials, in all things, charity”
